Wood, as an element in interior design subtly brings nature indoors. Although there are differences among wood species and various designs, parquet and skirtings are usually easy to combine with other elements of interior.

Tarkett offers different profiles of skirtings, in various designs and colours.

Parquet and skirtings as integral parts of interior

Harmonized natural appearance of wooden floor is an ideal base to build on, towards specific interior design, fulfilling different personal styles and tastes. Parquet creates general impression of the room, while carefully chosen skirting completes its total look. Skirting in interior is just as important as the collar on the shirt – a small detail, making a huge difference. A good skirting provides better look to the interior, completing overall impression.

Small detail making a huge difference

When it comes to choosing the right skirting, there is more than one approach.

1. Skirtings in harmony with parquet (on the floor, wall, stairways...), where they look as a natural extension of parquet. Thanks to this choice, the room appears larger and more spacious.
2. Skirtings in harmony with the rest of the woodwork in an interior – doors, windows, etc. With this solution, interior is more cheerful, with accentuated lines of interior, shape of windows, doors and the whole room.
3. Skirtings as neutral decorative element in white. White skirtings are easily combined in an interior with its neutral colour. They make the interior more beautiful with its simple and flat shape, wavy lines, or ornaments.

Skirting shapes are most often harmonized with the style of interior.

Flat profile with rounded, or sharper edges are simple and modern solution. Curved profile has classical skirting design, easily combined with classic interiors. Ornamental skirtings are especially effective if decorative details are used on ceilings, as well. They also can be effective on flat walls in modern interiors.

Original and unique interiors

Parquet on the wall reflects current trends in using natural materials, with enhanced texture and natural colours. Possibilities for combining and creating solutions are numerous, where you can choose among options with invisible joints, bevelled edges, installing parquet on wall with or without the frame, with vertical, or horizontal orientation of boards.

Endless possibilities

There are various possibilities for decorating walls with parquet: whole wall, from ceiling to the floor, one segment of the wall with, or without the frame – e.g. bed headboard, behind the tv set etc., different geometrical shapes - wall niches, corners, etc.

Decorative and functional solution

Advantages of using parquet on wall are not solely decorative ones – parquet also protects the wall from dirt and damages. It can cover installations (cables, LED lighting, etc.), making the space safer, and at the same time, more beautiful. Parquet is easy to be installed on the wall, without gluing. It is also simple for maintenance, with stable performances – quality surface treatment and locking system, and it can be adapted to different areas and shapes.
